Brain-fag!

WORRY, ANXIETY, OVER-WORK.

BRAIN-FAG is an expression used to convey the idea of that condition of the brain where it is tired, worn-out or broken down from various causes, such as worry, anxiety, over-work and excesses of various kinds. In cases of this kind the first impulse is to resort to stimulants, which may give temporary relief, but wherever there is stimulation there is bound to be a reaction, which leaves the sufferers in a far worse condition than they were before.

GENTLE, NATURAL STIMULANT.

WHAT we want in these... cases is a brain food combined with a stimulant that will not react. Stimulation without reaction is apparently an anomaly, but the experience of the medical profession all over the world proves that in CELERINA we have such a combination. Besides being a gentle and natural stimulant, it also serves as a food to the shattered nervous system, and soon restores and maintains it in its normal condition.....

Nervous Prostration

As the enlightenment of the world progresses, we are more and more often brought face to face with the fact that the generation of force, of whatsoever kind, is the result of consumption, and the somewhat appalling truth is forced upon the medical profession that the wonderful advance in intellectual attainments by the human family is at the expense of the nervous system, the generator of that force which is stirring and revolutionizing the world to-day; and the necessity of, in some way, supplying means for the repair of the terrific waste thus going on, is taxing to the uttermost the busy, worried and overworked physician, himself often thus made a victim, while shoulder to shoulder with him, ever trying to second his efforts, and lighten, if possible, his burdens, stands the skillful, conscientious pharmacist.

And the question is often presenting itself to the physician, too busy to carefully investigate, How shall I procure the much needed rest and aid in restoring vigor to the overwrought nervous system?

The results of nervous depression are far-reaching. All the viscera seem to perform their functions through the stimulus furnished by the great sympathetic nervous system, and the need for this stimulus is communicated, through its connections, by the cerebro-spinal or central system. When from worry, trouble, overworked mentality, or from any other cause, the great nervous center is not able to communicate this need to the plexuses of the sympathetic controlling the various viscera, there follows a cessation of their functions, and the organ or organs thus neglected by their great master and trainer, become quiescent, fail entirely or in part, as the case may be, and we have what we may call nervous depression or prostration.

As woman, because of her peculiar nervous organism exerts an influence without which the world would at once retrograde, so, because of that same peculiar organism, she is made to realize more than man the power for evil which is consequent upon an excessive strain laid upon the mental powers, and there are to-day few of them who are not, to a greater or less extent, suffering from the consequences of over-strain and worry because of the many cares of life.

But man is by no means exempt, and in these days of hurry and rush, where excessive mentality must necessarily be called into play, we find the percentage growing constantly larger and larger. How often is it the case where we see a man, intellectually a giant; as a worker, constant; as an accomplisher, wonderful; and, as he moves among men, his forcefulness is acknowledged, and the results of his work surprising. Yet, ere we have had a thought of its possibility, the powerful strain borne begins to tell upon him, and his physician is called upon to furnish relief from the many troubles and tired feeling which have so suddenly forced themselves upon him.

Now it is to meet the indications in these cases that CELERINA is recommended to the medical profession, not as a specific, but as a scientific combination of those agents which experience and long trial have shown to be well calculated to meet all requirements in such cases, and to assist tired nature in getting upon her feet again. These agents are most carefully selected from the very best stocks produced, and neither pains nor expense are spared in securing uniformity of strength and quality, which we guarantee.

In celery, which is always the very choicest, we have a delicate stimulant for the stomach, especially when combined with aromatics, while the action upon the nervous system is of a tonic and pleasantly stimulating nature, without a resultant depression.

In coca we have an agent which has a most happy effect upon the tired and jaded nervous system, removing the seeming load of depression, clearing the ideas and producing a pleasant, good natured state of mind, which, though not followed by depression as would be a diffusible stimulant, is conducive to quiet and sleep.

In the kola nut we have a most wonderful remedy by which the muscular strength may be retained and kept up, as is done by the natives of Africa among whom it grows, and in this way a great strain is removed from the nervous system and a much needed rest secured, while the muscular organism goes on with its action unimpaired because of nerve force being absent.

Viburnum has long enjoyed the reputation of being nervine, diuretic, astringent and tonic, but the chief claim is that it acts as a uterine sedative, preventing threatened miscarriage. Probably it regulates and controls muscular action in the pelvic organs, producing normal action and arresting abnormal tendencies. Its action, once obtained, continues, and is permanent, it is claimed.

Nervous Prostration.

Now, when we have a case of nervous prostration on our hands, we know it results from overwork or worry, and the tired brain, in a highly excited state, fails to act as the director of the general system, and functional disorder of the heart, stomach, kidneys, bowels or pelvic organs follows. What shall we do? Give a teaspoonful of CELERINA every three or four hours for a day or two, and continue to give three doses a day till fully relieved.

By so doing we gently stimulate the stomach, tone up the nervous system, clear up and rest the mind, give vigor to the muscular system, regulate reflex pelvic trouble, and allow the brain to recuperate until the normal action through the cerebro-spinal nerves is communicated to the sympathetic system, and the tired wheels move on again.

To the worried business man who, feeling his strength flagging, has sought to hold himself up by the use of stimulants, CELERINA is a boon indeed, and, if taken regularly and continued, will supply the needed tone and put him on his feet again.

Letters without number almost, from physicians everywhere, to whom alone we offer CELERINA and ask a trial, give the most cheering reports, and bear us out in the positions above taken.

Nervous Prostration.

Have given your preparation of CELERINA a fair trial in the case of a man, aged 57, suffering from the effects of great nervous prostration, loss of memory and brain fag, and I am happy to inform you that he has received marked benefit from its use. His nervous system, which was completely unstrung, is now much improved, and the mental worry gradually declining. Since he finished the bottle of CELERINA, he is getting more energetic in his business, and all the brain fatigue has disappeared.

JOSEPH DUGGAN,

M. C. P. I., L. M., Etc., Coolarne, Co. Galway, Ireland.

I have used CELERINA in my practice with very satisfactory results in nervous debility, and with good results in nervous headache, nervous prostration and sleeplessness, giving tone as well as quiet to the nervous system. I regard it as a splendid nerve tonic. I have used it in spermatorrhea with good results, and in a case of insanity it quieted the mental excitement and promoted sleep, and as it is free from toxic effect, it can be used in doses to have the desired effect without any danger, which is more than can be said of some other medicines that are used as nerve tonics and sleep-producing agents. I can conscientiously recommend it as a valuable nerve tonic in all cases of nervous prostration.

D. CONNOR, M. D.,

Simpsonville, Ky.

CELERINA had a pleasant stimulant and tonic effect on a patient who suffered with chronic anemia and debility.

T. R. ATKINSON,

M. R. C. S., L. S. A., 47 Earls Court Road, Kensington, London, England.

After thoroughly testing CELERINA, I am pleased to state that I find it a splendid nerve tonic and stimulant.

Impotency.

CELERINA is very useful

Celerina

Is indispensable to restore a patient after alcoholic excess. Acts as a stimulant and nerve tonic without re-acting.

Impotency

R. J. Trippe, M. D.,
Taylorsville, Ga., says:

After giving CELERINA a full and fair trial, am prepared to say I have obtained most satisfactory results from its use in my practice. As a remedy for sexual debility, in my judgment it has no superior.

J. C. Mathews, M.D.,
Raleigh, Ill., says:

I have prescribed CELERINA in a case of partial impotency of long standing with satisfactory results to the patient. Am much pleased with it, and regard it as a valuable acquisition to therapeutics.

G. Wiensma, M. D.,
Wahpeton, Dak., says:

I can give my testimony to the profession as to the value of CELERINA as an aphrodisiac and in the treatment of seminal emissions and nervous diseases generally. I think I saved a young man's life by the use of CELERINA. I prescribe it almost daily.

W. R. S. Connell, M.D.
Professor Principles and Practice of Medicine, College of Physicians and Surgeons, Manchester, O., says:

I have given CELERINA a fair test in cases of debility resulting from sexual excess, and am much pleased with its action. In one of the cases, the dyspepsia, which was a prominent complication, was also cured by its use.

IMPOTENCY.

Have been using Celerina in my practice for some time, and find it almost a specific in cases of mental and physical debility, induced by overwork or study, but its happiest effects are in restoring vitality and tone to the sexual organs of either sex, where the debility was caused by improper use and abuse of those organs. I can cheerfully recommend its use in all cases of nervous prostration from any cause.

W. PARK, M. D.,
Fieldon, Ill.

Spermatorrhea

J. W. HALL, M. D., Benton, Ark., says: I have prescribed CELERINA in a case of seminal debility, and have obtained splendid success, even beyond my most sanguine expectations. Shall continue to use it in my practice.

CAUTION

THE Great Reputation of Kennedy's Pinus Canadensis, Aletris Cordial and Celerina has caused cheap and unreliable preparations to be sold as substitutes for them. Some of these preparations are not only worthless, but absolutely harmful.

As a precaution, it is not only necessary to specify these preparations, but also to see that the patient gets the genuine article. Cheap substitutes of reliable preparations of ESTABLISHED REPUTATION are constantly offered to druggists as "just as good," and the temptation to the druggist to make more profit is VERY GREAT; hence, UNLESS CARE IS USED IN AVOIDING SUBSTITUTES, the physician will invariably be disappointed in results.

Spermatorrhea

J. F. RUMER, M. D., Richfield, Mich., says: I have used CELERINA in the following case with excellent results: Mr. G. N. P., a merchant of this place, consulted me for seminal weakness. Patient had suffered considerably the winter before from insomnia, but under the use of the bromides had recovered, and had been feeling unusually well. I first put him on a course of damiana, tr. nux vom. and bromide potass., and for a short time he seemed to be improving, but after a while he gradually grew worse. I then added to the treatment the use of the battery, and finally fitted him with a galvanic belt with suspensory attachment, but this only afforded him temporary relief. Finally, at his suggestion, we began using CELERINA, and although very skeptical in regard to getting any benefit from it, or in fact anything else, I must confess that he began to improve almost immediately, and at this time says he considers himself cured. As a nerve tonic I consider it a grand remedy. Have used it with excellent results in one case of chorea, also in the exhaustion following protracted sickness of any kind.

HENRY S. COX, M.D., Franklin, Mich., says: I used CELERINA in the case of a young man of sober habits, but afflicted with spermatorrhea to such a degree that he was very much alarmed at his condition, and had he not made a confidant, I think his mental system would have been dethroned, but he is fast recovering by the use of CELERINA and ferri et strych. cit. I have no hesitation in saying that the CELERINA is a very valuable remedy in such cases in combination with the above.

Hypochondriasis.

B. G. CULVER, M. D., Humboldt, Kan., says: I have used CELERINA in the following cases: Mrs. P., a delicate nervous young woman, after the loss of an infant child and months of watching, succumbed to a complete nervous exhaustion and melancholic mania. I prescribed CELERINA, and had the satisfaction to see her restored from a most pitiable condition of mind and body to a normal and vigorous power in their functions. Have frequently prescribed it since with good results.

AMBROSE ATKINSON, M. R. C. S., 107 Becket Street, Leeds, Eng., says: I found CELERINA useful in a case of hypochondriasis, and I believe it to be a valuable restorative in various forms of nervous exhaustion.

H. NEBEKER, M. D., Clinton, Ind., says: CELERINA is an excellent nerve tonic. I have used it in hysteria and hypochondria with marked success. No better remedy in nervous troubles arising from mental derangement.

Nervous Headache.

S. BARKER, M. D., 24 Caton Place, Brighton, Eng., says: CELERINA gave prompt relief in languor, nervous headache and dyspepsia.

Nervous Headache

G. C. BALDWIN, M. D.,

Bloomingsport, Ind., says:

I have had sufficient experience with your CELERINA to satisfy me that it is an invaluable contribution to the medical profession on your part. The patient for whom it has been prescribed had been suffering for years from sick headache, at times being utterly prostrated, an irritable stomach rendering it difficult to find any remedy which could be used for several hours. Under the use of this CELERINA his strength was increased and appetite improved. If given at the commencement of an attack of nervous headache it will check it.

CHARLES J. WATS, M. R. C. S.,

Fordham Lodge, Fordham, Essex, Eng., says:

I have much pleasure in stating that the cases that I tried your CELERINA in were for nervous headache, and they derived much benefit from the remedy.

Nervous Headache.

C. C. RILEY, M.D.,
Waller, Ohio, says—

I am now using CELERINA with great satisfaction to myself and my patients. Have used it with excellent success in nervous headaches, nervous prostration, sleeplessness, neuralgia, and nervous dyspepsia. In a practice of nine years I have never found anything to equal it as a nerve tonic and stimulant. I give it my warmest endorsement. I hope others will find as much therapeutic value in it as I have.

R. WILLIAMS,
Surgeon, 69 Vauxhall Rd., Liverpool, Eng., says—

It gives me great pleasure to testify to the good results obtained from the use of CELERINA in two cases of nervous headache, arising from general debility. Both patients made rapid progress by taking CELERINA in teaspoonful doses, thrice daily. Ordinary treatment had failed to give much relief or satisfaction previous to taking your CELERINA. In conclusion, I consider your preparation, by following directions given, will not in any way disappoint any physician in its therapeutic effects, but will be found a reliable remedy for the purposes indicated.

H. L. DOWSING,
M. R. C. S. Eng., and L. S. A. Lond., 121 Beverly Rd., Hull, Eng., says—

I have used CELERINA in cases of nervous headache with very good results, and in two cases of dysmenorrhea I have been equally satisfied. It is an elegant preparation and patients like it.

H. L. WOLFE, M.D.,
Milnes, Page Co., Va., says—

I can testify that your CELERINA acts splendidly in all cases of nervous exhaustion dependent upon disease generally, upon alcoholism, uterine diseases, natural atonic conditions, nervous headaches, nervous dyspepsia, and, in fact, in any condition of the system requiring that quiet rest which can not often be gotten from any drug without subsequent depression.

Neuralgia.

THE psychological depressions and neuralgias so common in the period following a debauch are lessened or disappear entirely by the use of Celerina.

EVERY PHYSICIAN

Has a certain class of patients who worry him a good deal, for while not being exactly ill or confined to their beds, they are always complaining of a feeling of depression, loss of energy, restlessness, insomnia, and a general feeling of "je ne sais quoi;" and while these symptoms may indicate a certain form of neurosis or nervous debility, he is at a loss as to what to prescribe, for while there are numerous remedies for nervous diseases, he is often puzzled as to which to use. It is in this class of cases that CELERINA, a combination of Celery, Coca, Kola and Viburnum, is indicated, for while not acting as an unnatural stimulus, it soon restores the tired and jaded nervous system to its normal condition, and brings about a feeling of buoyancy and energy that will be pleasing and surprising to both physician and patient, and will induce him to confirm the verdict of his brethren all over the world as to the virtues of this preparation. It is put up in elegant and palatable form, and being made of the best material in large quantities, it is always uniform and certain in its results.

W. L. EMMERSON, L. M., L. S. A., M. R. C. S., Waltham, Meltham-Mowbray, Leicestershire, Eng., writes: I have tried CELERINA with good effect in a case of nervous debility and melancholia, and also with great benefit in a case of vomiting of pregnancy with great prostration and faintness. As I suffer much from neuralgic pains in the wrists and arms, after a long round on horseback or a day's hunting, I have repeatedly tried the effect of a teaspoonful of CELERINA before going out and after returning, and found complete immunity result.

Neuralgia.

H. S. CAMPBELL, M. D., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: I have used CELERINA and am well pleased with it in the many cases that call for its administration, and have found it very efficacious in the various neuralgic conditions peculiar to women.

FREDERICK HALL, M. D., M. R. C. S., L. S. A., St. Mark's House, Leeds, Eng., writes: I have found CELERINA useful in cases of facial neuralgia.

J. T. HENDERSHOTT, M. D., Dundas, Ill., writes: I used your CELERINA in a case of nervous neuralgia with scrofulous diathesis. It was the only thing that gave relief to the patient.

M. K. DEVANE, M. D., Magnolia, N. C., writes: I have used your CELERINA in neuralgia and it acts like a charm. It is all that you claim for it.

NEURALGIA

The one great characteristic of all varieties of neuralgia is debility of the nervous system, and whatever tends to produce structural or functional enfeeblements of the nerves induces neuralgia, hence all the causes we have named as inducing loss of nerve power may be cited as causes of neuralgia. This affection, when not directly the result of some physical cause interfering with integrity of the nerve system in which the pain is situated, is invariably due to loss of nerve power. Its very existence is evidence of deficient energy. The remote factor may be malaria, syphilis, rheumatism, gout, or any other cause capable of devitalizing the organism, and as a consequence that of the nerves also. Our remedial measures should therefore be directed principally to improving the nutrition of the nervous system generally, and to the removal of any constitutional taint that may be present. The first indication is filled by CELERINA and a generous diet. In facial neuralgia and brow ague it should be administered in connection with quinine, or other tonic remedy, and if malarial influence be suspected, full doses of some reliable anti-malarial remedy should be given. The CELERINA treatment is also applicable to sciatic and spinal neuralgias. Neuralgia in men is frequently an expression of loss of nerve power, the direct consequence of dissipation and excesses of various kinds, but overwork and intense intellectual exertion will also produce it. Where the pain is located is of little moment, the treatment should be general. In these cases CELERINA seldom fails to give relief. Women suffer more frequently and more intensely from neuralgia than men. They are liable to be affected by all the causes which induce it in men, besides the derangements in health associated with menstruation—menorrhea especially. Hyperfecundation (rapid child-bearing), frequent miscarriage, hemorrhage, prolonged lactation and changes occurring at the climacteric period of life, all tend to induce a neuralgic condition of the nerves. The general treatment should be directed to the removal of the cause whenever this is possible. In these cases CELERINA, combined with ALETRIS CORDIAL, will be found to exercise a magical influence.

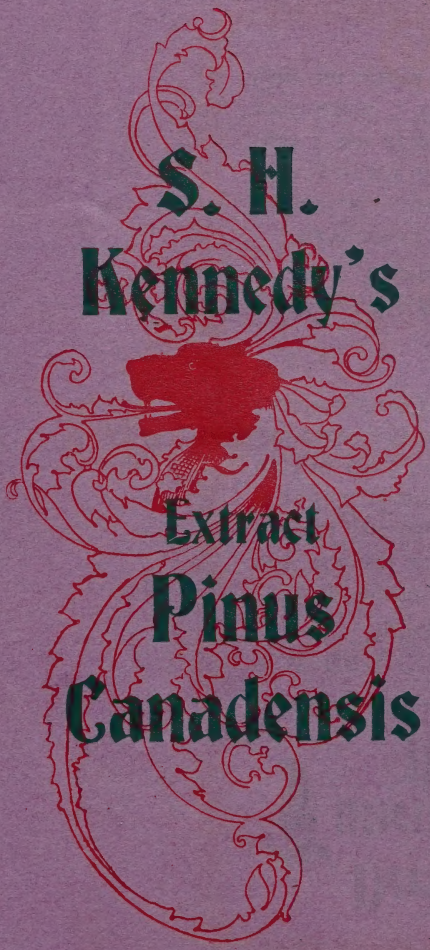
Nervous and Functional Heart Disease.

S. S. WELCH, M. D.,
Hollenberg, Kan., says:

I have been using CELERINA in nervous diseases and also in functional diseases of the heart, and am satisfied that it equals, if not surpasses, any remedies used in over twenty years' practice, and can cheerfully recommend it to the profession generally.

D. B. MEYERS, M. D.,
Stoneville, Miss., says:

I have tested the merits of CELERINA in several cases—one case of functional derangement of the heart—and can say that I am satisfied with it. In nervous prostration I find nothing to excel it. Can not afford to be without it.



I Have used S. H. KENNEDY'S Extract PINUS CANADENSIS in some affections of the Rectum, Vagina and Cervix Uteri. I have used it considerably diluted as a Vaginal Wash with great success, but I prefer to apply it to the os tincae on cotton wool, either pure or mixed with glycerine, or glycerine and rosewater. Thus applied, it should remain intact for two or three, or even four days, and then be renewed. In this way I have seen Chronic Granular Erosions, with Leucorrhea, disappear very rapidly under its use. I have not time to do more than call the attention of my professional brethren to this new extract, which I am sure will soon be recognized as a valuable addition to our Materia Medica.

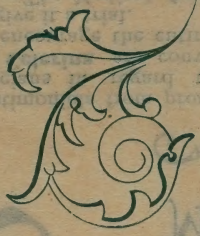
Paralysis.



J. W. JOHNSTON, M. D.,
Frederica, Ia.

I have given your preparations a trial in the case of Mrs. J., aged 50 years, paralysis of the left side; there was also prolapsus of the uterus, with much pain and tenderness. I prescribed CELERINA and ALETRIS CORDIAL, in teaspoonful doses each, three times per day, and am well pleased with results. The patient is very much improved, in fact, is able to do the most of her work.

OPINIONS OF THE MEDICAL PRESS

THE testimonials from prominent physicians in regard to the merits of Celerina are convincing enough to encourage the entire profession to give it a trial.

—The Medical Analectic.

A GOOD many letters are received which read something like this: I have used Celerina in nervous debility, hystero-epilepsy and the various neuroses, and find it a grand and efficient remedy. It works like a charm. —St. Louis Polyclinic.

WE wish to add our testimony to the universal verdict as to the reliability of Celerina. There are few articles more used by physicians, or more relied upon in the diseases for which it is recommended, than this great nerve tonic and antispasmodic.

PARALYSIS

M. S. THOMPSON, M. D.,

Macon, Ga., writes:

I have prescribed your CELERINA for an old English lady who suffered from paralysis. It did her so much good that she has since been using it. Her vocal powers are sometimes so suspended that she can scarcely speak, but CELERINA always relieves them, and I am a true believer in its pre-eminent virtues.

Paralysis

J. F. FAULKNER, M. D.,

BIRDSEYE, IND., SAYS:

I have prescribed Celerina in cases of nervous prostration and paralysis, and have found it invaluable in these complaints.

DR. GEORGE W. COPE,

NAZARETH, PA., SAYS:

I have been using your Celerina in my own case for paralysis for at least eight months, and from its continued use I feel that I am steadily improving, and have no doubt but I will again recover completely.

CHAS. W. SNEAD, M. D.,

MERIWETHER, MD., SAYS:

Celerina was used in my own case, with the most gratifying results. I had been suffering for several years with steadily increasing nervous debility, had been partially paralyzed on the left side for three years, and suffered much with neuralgia, was completely prostrated and confined to the house, and most of the time to the bed. I commenced taking the Celerina in dessertspoonful doses three times a day, and immediately my bowels commenced acting naturally, which they had not done without a cathartic since I was paralyzed. The sense of prostration and confusion of intellect was removed, and the neuralgia rapidly improved. Before I finished the bottle I resumed the practice of my profession and the superintendence of my farm. My condition is vastly improved, in fact I feel well with the exception of slight lumbago and some hyperasthenia of the left side. In a pretty extensive practice of over twenty-five years I have used nothing that will compare with Celerina as a nerve tonic, and if you will be careful to keep it up to the present standard, there will be no doubt of its general use by the profession.

Hysteria

B. KINYON, M. D.,
Triangle, N. Y.,
writes:

I have used CELERINA and was very much pleased with the result. The case in which I used it was hysteria resulting from uterine troubles, and it did wonders.

Headache

Hysteria

W. H. S. CRABB, M. D.,
White Run, Ky., says:
CELERINA is an excellent remedy in hysteria and nerve prostration. I have discovered something that I believe you do not claim for it. It will arrest atrophy of the testicle, consequent of metastasis of mumps, from the parotid gland to the testicle.

A. O. PICKERING, M. D.,
Fullens, Tenn., says:
I prescribed CELERINA in a case of physical and nervous wreck, almost amounting to hysteria, and it relieved the nervous paroxysms very nicely.

WM. GROSS, M. D.,
Griffin, Ind., says:
I have given CELERINA a trial with the very best results. I treated Mrs. R. L., a very obstinate case of hysteria, with success. I gave her the usual treatment of nervines and antispaamodics with only temporary relief. I then gave her CELERINA, in teaspoonful doses, every three hours for three weeks, and to-day she is well and hearty, and has no symptoms of hysteria.

Hysteria

A. C. Hullinger, M. D.,
Minneapolis, Kan., writes:

I received great satisfaction in the use of your CELERINA on a lady suffering from hysteria and the morphine habit.

Lewis B. Parsell, M. D.,
Closter, N. Y., writes:

I have used CELERINA in a very bad case of hysteria. It acted like a charm. It is a valuable nerve tonic.

A. J. Lawrence, M. D.,
Osborn, Mo., writes:

I think CELERINA the best nerve tonic we can get, and it, in connection with ALETRIS CORDIAL, will cure any case of hysteria.

He was on the verge of mania a potu, morphine and bromide of potass. both having failed to quiet his nerves or produce sleep. CELERINA did both. I have since used it as a tonic in nervous dyspepsia with good results. I regard it as an excellent remedy.

J. L. GARDNER, M. D.,
Voluntown, Conn., says:

I used CELERINA in one perplexing case of nerve irritation and neurasthenia, when morphine was constantly resorted to, and the result was highly gratifying. Patient quite strong and free from the habit of using anodynes. The CELERINA has proven effectual in other depressed conditions where I have prescribed it.

INEBRIETY

Delirium Tremens, Opium Habit, Etc.

TO OVERCOME the appetite for strong drink we must employ a remedial agent which, while acting as a stimulant and tonic on the system, will cause no disgust for it or nausea when its use is continued for some time. In CELERINA we have almost a certain cure. CELERINA, while causing no nausea whatever through and by itself, will, in most cases, as extensive experience has proven, imbue the person using it with an actual disgust for, and an abhorrence of all kinds of, strong drink. In the varied conditions following the abuse of alcohol, opium and tobacco, to restore the patient and tone the nervous system, CELERINA is of great value, and as a tonic to the nervous system in all these cases of nervous exhaustion, whether evolved in the cerebral or spinal centers. CELERINA, in doses of a fluid drachm three times a day, destroys the craving for alcoholic liquors. CELERINA is a remedy par excellence to tone the nervous system in the varied conditions following sexual excesses and the abuse of alcohol, opium and tobacco.

GEORGE C. PITZER, M. D., Professor Practice, American Medical College, St. Louis, Mo., says: There is nothing that restores a patient after a fit of drunkenness like CELERINA. It excels anything I ever tried.

G. F. W. LEE, M. D., Leeds, Eng., says: In a case of nervous exhaustion following alcoholism, I have to report great benefit derived from CELERINA.

Dyspepsia

DERANGED DIGESTION is the most common of all human ailments. It is a truism that no organ of the body can preserve its normal integrity when its supplying nerve is disordered by lowered tone, but this fact is largely ignored in these modern pepsin days, the cause being lost sight of whilst trying to remedy the effect. It is well known that an unusual worry or anxiety will upset the digestion of the neurotic patient. Hence, in treating dyspepsia, particularly atonic dyspepsia, that form met with in persons of low vitality and poor appetite, there are two distinct indications, one is to subserve the needs of general nutrition, the other is to subserve the needs of the nervous system. This can be done by giving the patient good nutritious food and a good nerve tonic. This explains why such remarkable results follow the daily use of CELERINA in all dyspeptic troubles.

Celerina

AFTER the removal of alcohol, CELERINA given in doses of from one-half to one ounce every four hours is speedily followed by the most characteristic symptoms of improvement.

Dyspepsia

L. F. ANDREWS, M. D., Des Moines, Iowa, says: I used Celerina in my own family in the case of my wife, who suffered greatly from dyspepsia. I can give no more expressive result than to use her own words: "When I began to use Celerina I had no stomach at all; now I can eat anything with perfect comfort."

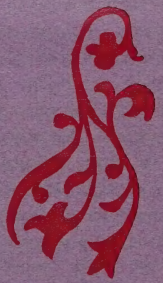
G. W. WATTS, M. D., Auxvasse, Mo., says: I find Celerina very useful in cases of old persons whose digestive powers are failing, and in the convalescing period of those old persons from acute diseases, such as pneumonia, bronchitis, gastro-enteric troubles, etc. In two cases recently treated of this kind, Celerina seemed to restore both the nervous and digestive systems. Both of these cases were very old persons; they are now apparently well.

ROBERT THORNBURN, M. B., 18 Campbell Street, Newcastle-on-Tyne, says: I derived very much benefit from Celerina in indigestion, in my own case, and in nervous debility.

Insomnia

H. C. PECKHAM, M. D., Freeport, Mich., says: I find your CELERINA of great advantage in nervous prostration, loss of nerve power, insomnia, etc.

HERBERT DAVISON, L. C. P. I., Northolme, Lines, Eng., says: I found CELERINA efficacious in a case of nervous prostration, with insomnia and profuse night sweats. I prescribed two teaspoonful doses at bed time, and was pleased with the result of the first dose, as the patient had enjoyed refreshing sleep, and the "sweating" was very materially diminished. It has acted well as a tonic to the nervous system.



A. P. MURRAY, M. D., Albany, Ind., says: I have used your CELERINA in a case of sleeplessness due to overwork, and also in a case of nervous prostration due to excessive use of alcoholic stimulants. In both cases the results were eminently satisfactory. I have used it in many other cases with good results.

R. B. ROOT, M. D., Georgetown, Mass., says: Of CELERINA I can only say that the effects in nervous exhaustion were so favorable that I have continued to prescribe it ever since. The effect in insomnia is very marked, causing quick sleep, with absolutely no unpleasant after-effects.

Epilepsy

For eighteen years past I have treated a young man for injury to the base of the brain, caused by a fall from a bridge. Ultimately he improved so that he could get about, but in seven months after injury he was taken with epileptic convulsions, which regularly appeared from three to five times per month. Myself and other physicians gave him all the remedies known to therapeutics in such cases, but with no other benefit than to lessen return of convulsions. Some two years since I gave him CELERINA, and in a short time the convulsions ceased, and have not returned in more than two years. I attribute all my success in this case to CELERINA, as he has not taken a drop of any other medicine in all that time. He is now well and at work on the farm. CELERINA has done the work, after a failure of fourteen years and six months with other remedies.

OPINIONS OF THE MEDICAL PRESS

Celerina is a standard article with the profession, and justly enjoys the reputation it has gained.

—Southern Clinic.

We have used Celerina with excellent results, and have no hesitancy in recommending it to the profession as wholly trustworthy and reliable in every particular.

—J. R. BRIGGS, M. D., Editor, A. M. ELMORE, M. D., Business Manager, Texas Health Journal.

An extensive experience with Celerina warrants the affirmation that it is reliable and trustworthy.

—Indiana Eclectic Medical Journal.

Celerina as a nerve tonic in our hands has proven eminently satisfactory. This preparation has stood the test of time, and is entitled to the endorsement of the profession by reason of the satisfaction it has given.

—Mississippi Valley Medical Monthly.

We have tried Celerina with the most gratifying results. It is a good nerve tonic and antispasmodic.

—Southern Practitioner.

Celerina is a great nerve tonic and antispasmodic.

EPILEPSY

E. L. MOONEY, M. D.,

Syracuse, N. Y., writes:

I have been testing your CELERINA for the past three months, and am more than pleased with its results. In a case of epileptiform convulsions, where they used to come on every two weeks, there has been relief from them now for two months, and the mental condition, which simulated melancholia, is very much improved. In a case of nervousness resulting from stopping smoking, it has had the desired result.

H. M. BANCA, M. D.,

Udell, Kan., writes:

Have given CELERINA and ALETRIS CORDIAL in two cases of epileptic fits with excellent results. First case: Mrs. L. S., aged 47 years, had fits every month for 20 years. I prescribed CELERINA one teaspoonful, three times a day, ALETRIS CORDIAL one teaspoonful, three times a day, and she has not had any fits now for four months, and her health has improved wonderfully. She had leucorrhea, but is now cured.

Aletris Cordial

Uterine Tonic and Restorative.

PREPARED FROM THE ALETRIS FARINOSA OR TRUE UNICORN.

INDICATIONS—Amenorrhea, Dysmenorrhea, Leucorrhea, Prolapsus Uteri, Sterility, to PREVENT Miscarriage, Etc.

DOSE—One teaspoonful three or four times a day.

UNRIVALED AS A UTERINE TONIC

IN IRREGULAR, PAINFUL, SUPPRESSED AND EXCESSIVE MENSTRUATION.

IT RESTORES NORMAL ACTION TO THE UTERUS, AND IMPARTS VIGOR TO THE ENTIRE UTERINE SYSTEM.

Aletris Cordial is prepared from the Aletris Farinosa, or TRUE unicorn (combined with aromatics). There has been and still exists much difficulty among herb-gatherers and druggists to determine the difference between the true and false unicorn, and hence the merit of the true unicorn is not generally known to the profession. Having made an exhaustive study of the true unicorn, and the results of very extended tests being eminently satisfactory, we are now warranted in offering to the profession the ALETRIS CORDIAL. We know that those physicians who will test it clinically will be much pleased with its action in diseases of the female generative organs.

Where Women have miscarried during previous pregnancies, or in any case where miscarriage is feared, the ALETRIS CORDIAL is indicated, and should be continuously administered during entire gestation.

Prepared EXCLUSIVELY for Prescriptions of Medical Men.
